Further comments regarding the course:

- I learned a lot about political science research in this course. This also meant that I had to put in more work than usual, which is fine. The instructor demanded more than others do, but he managed to convert that extra work of the students into refining our knowledge about empirical research in general. I also gained a lot of understanding on the course topic. One drawback of the course: the instructor showcased very high demands for the final work. It almost seemed like we have to provide publishable, top-notch research. This is not manageable for undergraduates and the instructor should rethink how he conveys his demands while keeping his high quality of teaching.
- I really appreciate how much dedication Chris has put into the seminar and really made an effort! I felt like this was among the most valuable courses I had so far.
